Dear Minister Furey,

RE: Concerns regarding illegal use of web monitoring tool by Nova Scotia RCMP

We are writing to you to express our grave concerns regarding recent reports about the Nova Scotia RCMP H Division's purchase and use of the Web Identity Search Tool ("WIST") from Toronto-based company LTAS Technologies.<sup>1</sup> Using WIST, police could select a Facebook user who had chosen to privatize their friends list - setting it to be seen by "only me" - and watch as the tool scoured the internet for leads from other accounts and filled in the missing list of friends. In promotional materials, the application was advertised as being capable of "unlock[ing] hidden friend lists," connecting any Facebook user to others with up to three "degrees of separation."

The Nova Scotia RCMP H Division listed WIST in a 2017 summary of its web monitoring tools along with other applications it used on a "covert laptop" when investigating members of organized crime groups. It is unclear when the contract for the use of WIST began or ended, but recent reports indicate that the product has been discontinued following a cease and desist letter sent to LTAS Technologies by Facebook.

It is deeply troubling to us that the RCMP used WIST for any period of time given that the RCMP failed to seek judicial authorization for its deployment. The use of this kind of technology by law enforcement engages several of the Charter's fundamental rights and freedoms. Section 8 of the Charter generally protects individuals from privacy invasions by the state, unless there are reasonable grounds to believe that the information sought will reveal evidence of a crime. This constitutional protection is harmonized with Canadian privacy legislation, which restricts the collection of personal information, including Facebook friends, "whether the personal information is available publicly or not."<sup>2</sup> The use of WIST by the RCMP also significantly impacts section 2 Charter rights to freedom of expression, peaceful assembly and association. Section 15 of the Charter, which protects equality rights, is also likely engaged if the use of WIST has further subjected marginalized communities to disproportionate surveillance by the police. This potential monitoring of equality-seeking groups and social movements by the RCMP is especially concerning.

Given the overall effects that these kinds of policing practices have upon human rights that involve the privacy, expression, association and equality of all people, we are alarmed that the RCMP sought to circumvent the Charter by purchasing data from a commercial entity like LTAS Technologies. There is a massive public interest in the use of such technology, given its invasive nature and potential lack of accuracy and. Earlier this year, Federal and Provincial Privacy Commissioners initiated a joint investigation into the use of facial recognition technology by law enforcement agencies after media revelations.<sup>3</sup> These unchecked practices by police leave people across Canada with attenuated rights and nurtures distrust amongst the public, as we never know when and to what extent the state is monitoring our private activities.

In your capacity as Minister of Justice for the Province of Nova Scotia, it is your duty to promote the preservation of peace, the prevention of crime, the efficiency of police services and the improvement of police relationships with communities within the Province.<sup>4</sup> For this purpose, the Minister may issue a directive or a standard operating or administrative procedure to one or more police departments in the province.<sup>5</sup> Additionally, the legislature has conferred upon you a very broad power to order an investigation into "any matter relating to policing and law enforcement in the Province, including an investigation respecting the operation and administration of a police department.”<sup>6</sup> Such an investigation may be conducted by any person and in any manner that the Minister sees fit.<sup>7</sup> Upon completion of an investigation, the Minister may take whatever action is appropriate, including the exercise of the Minister’s power to issue a directive or standard operating or administrative procedure under s. 5(3)(a).<sup>8</sup>

Nova Scotians expect the police to be accountable to the law and to the community it serves. Unless the RCMP operate in a manner consistent with fundamental community values, needs, and expectations - including respecting the rule of law - relationships between communities and the police will not improve.

The revelations about the RCMP using WIST without prior judicial authorization emphasize the need for independent and meaningful oversight of police agencies in Nova Scotia. We are reminded of the practise of street checks - another policing practise found to be illegal and discriminatory - which your government rightly intervened in and used its mandate to prohibit.

We request that you take the appropriate action now to hold the RCMP accountable to the public, and to protect everyone’s fundamental rights and freedoms. At a minimum, we ask that you issue a directive without delay to suspend the use of any internet surveillance tool such as WIST by police in Nova Scotia. We further request that, working with your federal counterparts to the extent necessary, you initiate an independent review of any past or ongoing usage of WIST and any other web monitoring tools that police in the province have used. After the independent review, the resulting report must be made public. Finally, we request that you set provincial policing standards once the review is over. These standards must reflect the state of the law and either outright ban or tightly circumscribe the use of internet monitoring tools by police.

Sincerely,
