MEET THE KEYNOTE

Audrey Siegl

sytemtəna:t, Audrey Siegl is an independent activist from the unceded lands of the Musqueam. She has been active on grassroots environmental and social justice-political frontline movements. Audrey has worked on raising awareness on Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls, the housing crisis, the Fentynal crisis, forced displacement and the connection between extractive industry projects and violations of First Nations, Land & human rights.

Trendshift

West Coast Leaf

Room 2245

There are two major goals of this workshop. The first is to open a space for discussion with young people about both the positive and negative ways the Internet is used in our lives, and to think about how stereotypes about gender, race, sexual orientation, ability, etc. impact the way we act online. The second is to clear up myths about what the law in British Columbia says about online behaviour – specifically when it comes to issues of criminal harassment and the sharing of intimate images. The goal is to engage critically and openly about how we can create an online culture that is safe, accessible, and positive for everyone who uses it. The focus of the workshop is shifting the trends in online culture through rights-based education. We believe youth are incredibly important to making this shift happen!

Workers Rights

BCGEU

Room 2270

Do you feel powerless at work? Do you have questions about what your boss can and cannot do? In this workshop we will go over basic employment rights under the Employment Standards Act. We will explore common workplace issues and the limitations of the system to protect your rights at work. We'll discuss how collective action can make a difference and what it means to form a union at work.

Anti-Oppression PeerNetBC

Room 1520

Participants create a shared understanding of the words tossed around when speaking about diversity. Through group discussions and experiential learning, participants will examine individual and systemic barriers, expectations and norms. Participants apply other lenses to broaden their perspectives about accessibility, inclusion, power and privilege.

Unpacking Raper Culture: Feminist Support & Resistance WAVAW

Room 2250

Sexualized violence is prevalent across all communities and affects all of us in one way or another. In this workshop, we will examine what rape culture is, how we have been socialized and impacted by it, and how it shows up in our day-to-day lives. We will also explore our roles in ending sexualized violence and the steps we can take to resist rape culture and support survivors in our schools and communities.

Keeping Up With Know Your Rights BCCLA

Room 7000

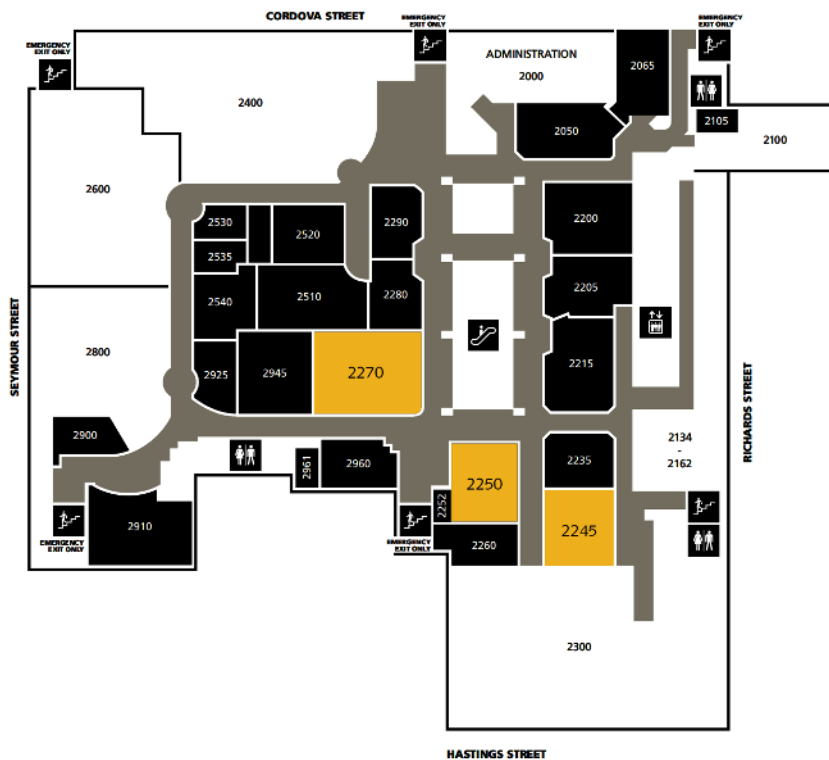

Living in this digital age, it has becoming increasingly more important for you to "Know Your Rights" respecting your cell phone. What are your rights when filming the police? What are your privacy rights in relation to social media? What are your rights when crossing the border? This workshop will provide valuable information on all these questions.
